There are plenty of sunny beach days to come this summer and autumn. Serious beachgoers understand that a day of sand and surf is best when you're well prepared.

Start with the humble beach bag. Bigger is better, because it means more options and plenty of room for all the essentials. These days, any good beach bag should have a zip-up pocket for important items such as keys and phone, not to mention a few coins should an ice-cream strike your fancy.

If you're in the market for new swimwear and want to invest in something you'll love for years to come, check out great Aussie labels such as Zimmermann, JETS, Camilla and Tigerlily.

Whether pin-up styles or fresh silhouettes are your thing, there's a lot of variety in trends this summer.

As well as bright prints and monochrome suits, colour blocking and black outlines help strike a flattering silhouette. These influences can be seen in many offerings.

Elsewhere, one-pieces have never looked better. Vintage influences and cutout details add a touch of glamour, and sometimes a daring look.

Sporty appeal definitely comes through, too, as racer fronts and high necks give a stylish and comfortable look. High-waisted bikini bottoms are also making a comeback.

Once out of the water, a cover-up might be necessary. These are available in plenty of different styles – playsuits, kimono-style tops and cute mini-dresses.

The slip, slop, slap factor is another essential consideration. A wide-brimmed hat, sunglasses and plenty of sunscreen will help make your beach visit even more enjoyable.

A beach tent might also serve you well if you're planning a day of it. In this case, a good book might be another welcome addition – as well as a cooler of cold drinks and post-swim snacks. \
